The AIT Soldiers of Company E, 369th Adjutant General Battalion, have teamed up with school children more than 1,000 miles away for "Operation Army Pride" — sending care packages to Soldiers deployed to Iraq and Afghanistan.

"The project started with my executive officer (1st Lt. Robert AuBuchon)," said 1st Lt. Shannon Cummings, company commander. "He came up with the idea to collect non-perishable items and send them to the Soldiers overseas. From there we took it on as a team and built upon it and developed Operation Army Pride."

In addition to the items the Soldiers collected, more than 300 letters will be included in the packages. The letters are from children in a Wisconsin elementary school where Cummings' sister is the principal.

"When I told her what we were doing, she said that she would love to partner together," Cummings said.

From the classroom to training to collecting items to send overseas, Cummings said she tries to introduce real-life scenarios for AIT Soldiers.

"Some of our platoon sergeants and cadre have been over to Iraq and Afghanistan so they were able to share the importance of getting a package or letter while you are Fort Jackson's Army Chaplain Center and School building was renamed Watters Hall Nov. 20 to honor a chaplain killed in action 40 years ago in Vietnam.

Chaplain (Maj.) Charles Watters, who was awarded the Medal of Honor posthumously, had just retrieved four wounded Soldiers while under enemy fire and then administered aid when he was killed.

"Few of us will ever be called upon to make choices like those Charles Watters made that day in November 1967, but each of us can and should be inspired by his example to demonstrate the same degree of selflessness as we provide spiritual leadership for the Army family," Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) Douglas Carver, the Army Chief of Chaplains, said in a letter read during the ceremony.

"Just as he repeatedly went outside the safety of his battalion's perimeter to save the lives of wounded troopers, to literally 'seek and save that which was lost' so should you and I resolve to be selfless shepherd-leaders to the flock over which God has given us charge."

Watters, who was assigned to Company A, 173rd Support Battalion, 173rd Airborne Brigade, died during an assault in the vicinity of Dak To, Republic of Vietnam, Nov. 19, 1967. The chaplain was moving with one of the companies when it engaged a heavily armed enemy battalion.

With "complete disregard for his own safety," Watters rushed forward. Unarmed and completely exposed, he moved among and in front of the advancing troops to give aid and assist in the evacuation of wounded Soldiers.

"When a wounded paratrooper was standing in shock in front of the assaulting forces, Chaplain Watters ran forward, picked the man up on his shoulders and carried him to safety," said re-

Fixing tree stands; vaccines for Korea assignment

Col. Dixon

Q I've noticed that some of the deer stands on Fort Jackson are in need of repair, what is being done to fix them?

A Outdoor Recreation has set up a Stand Repair Day and Fort Jackson hunters are encouraged to bring their tools and help repair those stands that need fixing.

In return for their help, the volunteers will receive one free day of rental for their choice of a bass boat, john boat, camper, picnic shed or grill.

For more information, call Marion Street Station at 751-3484.

Q I am scheduled for reassignment to Korea in January 2008. Will I be required to take Anthrax and Smallpox vaccinations before I go?

A Yes, Per MILPER Message Number 07-275, dated 15 Oct 07, Anthrax and Smallpox vaccinations are required for a permanent change of station, temporary change of station or temporary duty (if more than 15 days) in Korea or the Central Command area of responsibility.

Soldiers can initiate or resume Anthrax or Smallpox vaccinations 120 days from their scheduled PCS, deployment or TDY.

Individuals should arrive in Korea or USCENTCOM AOR having completed the Smallpox vaccination and begun the Anthrax vaccination series.

Rash decisions can ruin a promising military career

Heath Hamacher

A Soldier conceals a PlayStation Portable and leaves the post exchange without "rendering proper payment."

A Soldier strikes another Soldier; one goes to the hospital, the other to the Provost Marshal Office.

Soldiers test positive for marijuana during a command-directed urinalysis.

Recently, each of these potentially career-altering incidents occurred on post and were published in The Leader, leading me to wonder, "What the *#@! is going on?"

During my time in the Corps, I saw good Marines ruin their military careers and seriously limit future prospects by making bad choices. Many were young — but old enough to know better — with their whole lives ahead of them.

A PSP runs about $210. That's a nice chunk of change for somebody on, say, a private's pay, but is it worth risking a career and being branded a thief? In a moment of anger — perhaps aggravated by a few beers — is punching your battle buddy worth an assault conviction? Does no one know that doing drugs is against Army regulations? Oh, and the law.

Every branch of service has core values which are drilled into recruits' minds during basic training. They can usually be found printed on illustrative posters, stenciled onto barracks stairwells and on the pages of training manuals. Soldiers-in-training recite them at their drill sergeants' request.

Soldiers know their core values.

The thing is, there is a huge difference between knowing something and applying it. Knowing something is knowledge, applying it is wisdom. I could sit here all day talking about how compassionate I am, but until I do something compassionate, it's just an idea I hold about myself. If you want to know integrity, show integrity. If you want to be considered respectful, show respect.

The Army consists of Soldiers from many different cultures, religions, races and environments. But they all know, or should know, wrong from right. You don't have to memorize the Noble Eightfold Path of Buddhists to understand what is socially and morally acceptable.

People make mistakes, but sometimes it's better to learn from the misstep of others than to make them yourself. Soldiers have great career opportunities, both in and out of the service — the sky really is the limit.

When you go to the PX, pay for your stuff. Leave drugs alone. Fighting is for the battlefield, not the barracks.

You can spend years building the life you want but just one bad choice — a second's worth of action — can tear it all down.

Choose wisely, grasshoppers.

Local clergy experience Army chaplaincy mission

Chaplain (Maj.) Jeff Spangler
Installation Chaplain Office

Thirty-four local clergymen gathered at the Fort Jackson NCO Club Nov. 16 to participate in the installation's first "Civilian Clergy Appreciation Day."

The installation chaplain, Col. Henry Haynes, hosted this event as a way of building a bridge between civilian clergy and military chaplains.

"Many of our service members attend churches in the community, and we appreciate the support they provide," Haynes said. "Our expectation is that this event will 'demystify' Fort Jackson and give local clergy greater insight about what we do."

Brig. Gen. James H. Schwitters, Fort Jackson commanding general, welcomed the ministers with an insightful historical perspective regarding the origins of the installation and its relationship with the city of Columbia. He also explained some of the modern challenges and successes that occur in the process of turning young civilians into Soldiers.

"When I speak with parents after a graduation, many of them will express some level of astonishment over the fact that the Army was able to do in nine weeks what they as parents were not able to do in 18 or 19 years," Schwitters said.

Following the general's remarks, the group witnessed the end product of training for themselves, a Basic Combat Training graduation at Hilton Field.

Following the graduation, several chaplains joined them at the NCO Club for a meal. During this time, chaplains and local ministers talked about ministry to the military and gained a greater appreciation for one another through informal conversation. Civilian clergy experience with the military is very diverse. Some have no military experience, while others are retired Soldiers who were called by God to stay in the area and minister to Soldiers and their families.

"When I retired from the military I did not realize how challenging ministry would be, but it is exciting to see God at work in people's lives," one minister said.

Another clergyman with no military background found the event very beneficial for his own understanding of military parishioners' experience and background. "I have been a minister in the area for over 10 years and this is the first time I have seen and heard these things, this has been very helpful to me," he said.

Following the meal the group was welcomed by the Scott Nahrwold, Fort Jackson deputy garrison commander, followed by Col. Kevin Shwedo, Fort Jackson deputy commander, who described the installation's mission and shared his own personal appreciation for the essential role of the chaplain in the military.

"As a commander I always knew I was in for a long day when the chaplain would come into my office and then shut the door. I believe most commanders would agree that the role of the chaplain is vital to a unit," Shwedo said. "They have insights that no one else can provide and the ability to bring healing where no one else can."

Haynes concluded the visit by sharing his vision for greater interaction and collaboration between Fort Jackson chaplains and the local clergy.

"This event opens the door of partnership between chaplains and local clergy," he said. "It is my hope that future events will open the door a little wider and establish a very effective passage of information and support."

After the luncheon, participants visited the United States Army Chaplain Center and School for a tour of the Chaplain Corps Museum.

overseas, especially during the holidays," Cummings said. "When they do get over there (Iraq or Afghanistan) and they are on the receiving end, it is really going to hit home with them."

Pvt. Melissa Fancher said she understands the significance of what the company is doing.

"It makes me feel that in one small way that I'm helping my fellow Soldiers even though I'm not in Iraq," Fancher said. "I know that we will eventually be there as well, so it's nice to know that what we are doing today somebody will be doing for me tomorrow."

Pfc. Rebecca East has had family members who have been deployed. She said they told her what receiving a package meant to them.

"They said one of the hardest parts about being overseas was being away from someone you are used to counting on to encourage you," East said. "They said receiving a package now and then helped boost their spirits."

The three Soldiers chosen to receive the packages were selected from the <http://anysoldier.com> Web site. Cummings said the company has "essentially adopted them."

"They represent their company, so when you send a package to that one individual you're not just sending it — they distribute it out to their company," she said.

Cummings said she plans to incorporate "Operation Army Pride" into every AIT rotation, and she also hopes it will be adopted battalion wide.

Wounded warriors permitted to keep recruitment bonuses

J.D. Leipold
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Soldiers who become ill or are wounded while on active duty are entitled to keep all recruitment bonuses due them.

The Army reiterated that policy Nov. 21, after a Wounded Soldier inadvertently received a letter from the Army that stated he would be required to pay back any enlistment money he received.

"If you are ill or were injured while on duty, the Army will not ask you to repay any portion of your recruitment bonus," said Brig. Gen. Mike Tucker, assistant surgeon general for Warrior Care and Transition. "This money will stay in the hands of our Soldiers."

Army policy prohibits what is described as "recoupment" when it would be contrary to equity and good conscience, or would be contrary to the nation's interests. Those circumstances include, for example, "an inability to complete a service agreement because of illness, injury, disability or other impairment that did not clearly result from misconduct."

The Army is looking into the specifics behind former Soldier

Jordan Fox, who was injured while serving in Iraq. Fox told news media he had received a letter from the Army stating he would be required to repay a $3,000 enlistment bonus.

The general said Soldiers who have received letters from the Army asking for repayment of a recruitment bonus should contact the Wounded Soldier and Family Hotline to report the issue as soon as possible.

"If there's a problem, we are going to fix it," Tucker said. "We are committed to honoring our Warriors and Families in transition."

The hotline is staffed by subject-matter experts 24 hours a day, seven days a week to help speed the resolution of issues pertaining to wounded Soldiers and their Families. Callers will receive responses within 24 hours. For those who reside within the United States, the hotline can be reached at 800-984-8523.

Soldiers and families may also call from overseas assignments via the Defense Switch Network 312-328-0002 and within the U.S., 328-0002.

The hotline also receives messages via email at: wsfsupport@conus.army.mil.

tired Chaplain (Maj.) Gerald Pincince. "Chaplain Watters ran through intense fire to aid a fallen comrade."

A short time later, the paratroopers pulled back and Watters risked exposure to recover two wounded Soldiers. He then noticed that several wounded Soldiers were lying outside the newly formed perimeter. Without hesitation and ignoring attempts to restrain him, Watters left the perimeter three times in the face of small arms, automatic weapons and mortar fire to carry and assist the injured Soldiers to safety.

Satisfied that all of the wounded were inside the perimeter, he began aiding the medics, giving spiritual and mental strength and serving food and water. Watters was killed moments later from a friendly-fire bomb which was mistakenly dropped.

The Medal of Honor is the highest award for valor in action against an enemy force which can be bestowed upon an individual serving in the Armed Forces of the United States. Originally authorized by Congress at the beginning of the Civil War to recognize gallantry in action, the medal generally is presented to the recipient by the president in the name of Congress.

Chaplain (Maj.) Watters

N.J., Jan. 17, 1927, attended Seton Hall College and Immaculate Conception Seminary. He was ordained in 1953 and served parishes in Jersey City, Paramus and Cranford, N.J.

He became a chaplain in the New Jersey Air National Guard in 1962 and two years later entered active duty as an army chaplain. Ordered to Vietnam in 1966, Watters had already served the required 12-month tour and had voluntarily extended his duty for six more months. The funeral for Watters was held Dec. 11, 1967, at Fort Myer, Va., and burial followed in Arlington National Cemetery.

Gas prices; Education Center testing, IAC

Christina Garza

Community FIRST Coordinator

This week's article will focus on recently completed issues that were submitted to Community FIRST/Army Family Action Plan. The issues discussed in this article pertain to and were reviewed by the Army and Air Force Exchange Services and the Directorate of Human Resources.

The first issue came from a community member who said AAFES does a great job of establishing pricing that is competitive with the local economy. What is of concern is why gas prices on post include taxes in the amount of 16 cents per gallon.

AAFES reviewed this concern and responded that as a U.S. government instrumentality, it is exempt from state and local taxes unless the exemption is waived by an act of Congress.

The motor fuel tax exemption has been waived by Congress (Hayden Cartwright Act, 4 U.S.C. 104). Accordingly, AAFES pays state, federal and local motor fuel taxes, as well as underground storage fees, etc. on motor fuel.

The federal and state motor fuel taxes and other applicable fees paid by AAFES are included in the price and are paid to the appropriate taxing authority.

The second issue is about exam proctoring at the Fort Jackson Education Center. There are currently many community members taking distance learning courses through the Education Center. It seems as though not many choices are given to take the exams to complete the courses.

The recommendation is to supply information to the community as to how courses can be completed. DHR reviewed this issue and responded that proctoring exams resumed at the Fort Jackson Education Center effective July 2006.

Exam proctoring is available every Tuesday at 1 p.m., and every Thursday at 8 a.m. Since resuming this service, the Education Center has proctored approximately 30-40 exams per month to Soldiers, family members and retirees.

Community FIRST/AFAP is an ongoing process which allows community members to submit issues that cannot be fixed by the Interactive Customer Evaluation system.

Safety Spotlight

Unexploded ordnance a threat to Soldiers

Chris Frazier

U.S. Army Combat Readiness Center

FORT RUCKER, Ala. — A recent unexploded ordnance accident that claimed a Soldier is a deadly reminder to be extra cautious when handling munitions.

The Soldier was digging in front of his quarters when he discovered a yellow cylinder resembling a caulk tube. Once the Soldier brought the tube out of the ground, he banged it against a wall to knock off the dirt and determine what he was holding. The device, which turned out to be a BLU-97/B Combined Effects Bomb, exploded, killing the Soldier and wounding another.

The BLU-97 submunitions are yellow, soda-can-sized bomblets that are dispensed in large numbers to attack "soft" area targets. The bomblet case is made of scored steel designed to break into about 300 preformed ingrain fragments for defeating light armor and personnel.

The body of the BLU-97 is cylindrical in shape, about 20 centimeters long and has a 6 centimeter diameter. However, military and foreign munitions can come in a variety of types, sizes and shapes and may not be easy to recognize. They include, but are not limited to, small-arms ammunition, projectiles, cartridges, bombs, rockets, pyrotechnics, grenades, blasting caps, fuses, simulators and raw explosives.

According to the Defense Environmental Network and Information Exchange, when encountering UXO, always follow the 3Rs of explosive safety:

- Recognize the munition.

- Retreat from the munition. Do not touch or disturb it, but move carefully away, walking out the same path the area was entered.

Army officials urge Soldiers to be cautious when encountering unexploded ordnance like this BLU-97 submunition.

- Report the munition and its location.

Since fiscal 2005, there have been three Class A Army accidents resulting from Soldiers handling UXO. These accidents caused the deaths of three Soldiers. By following the 3Rs of explosive safety, Soldiers can help prevent fatalities. In combat areas or on training ranges, it's best to remember, "If you did not drop it, do not pick it up."

For more information on UXO safety, visit the Defense Environmental Network and Information Exchange's UXO Safety Education Program Web site at www.denix.osd.mil/uxosafety.

WTUs get new assistant surgeon general

Jerry Harben

U.S. Army Medical Command Public Affairs Office

One of the Army's top advocates for the care and treatment of its ill and wounded Soldiers and their families now will serve as assistant surgeon general for warrior care and transition.

The Army has assigned Brig. Gen. Michael S. Tucker, who has been deputy commander of the Army's North Atlantic Regional Medical Command as well as director of the Army Medical Action Plan, to lead the service's warrior care and transition effort.

Tucker, a two-time combat veteran, has been known by the media as a "bureaucracy buster," and was charged with transforming wounded warrior care in March following news reports a month earlier about substandard living conditions and procedural obstacles for wounded Soldiers at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, D.C.

"As a leader of Soldiers, I am humbled by this responsibility and the implications it will have on the force for years to come," said Tucker, a 35-year Army career veteran. "What we do today to transform the military health care system and respond to the needs of our Soldiers and their families — at a time in their lives when they need us most — will shape the force for years to come. Anything other than a complete transformation of the system is unacceptable."

Tucker and his staff have spearheaded efforts to create warrior transition units to give better leadership and supervision to Soldiers recovering from wounds, to improve their housing and other service facilities and to establish centers to provide administrative and social-work services for Soldiers and families.

Although Tucker's title has changed, his team remains focused on providing policy and program oversight of 35 WTUs with a staff in excess of 2,400 military members and civilian employees, and a budget of more than $1.2 million for Fiscal Year 2008.

The 35 WTUs are expected to be fully operational by early 2008, AMAP officials said.

"These warriors have risked life and limb to defend our nation's freedoms, and it is our duty to honor and serve them with compassion and dignity," Tucker said.

One sailor, 280 Soldiers re-enlist together in Iraq

Renanah Miles

American Forces Press Service

BAGHDAD — At Al Faw palace, one of Saddam Hussein's former homes, 280 Soldiers and one sailor re-enlisted earlier this month.

The palace was seized by 3rd Infantry Division out of Fort Stewart, Ga., in 2003. On the division's 90th birthday Nov. 21, Soldiers under its command renewed their commitment to the Army and the war on terror.

When Sgt. Patricia Daniels, of Headquarters and Headquarters Support Company, Support Troops Battalion, 3rd Infantry Division, re-enlisted during Operation Iraqi Freedom III, she did not know the significance of the date at first.

"Last time I was in Iraq, ... I re-enlisted on the 21st of November, not realizing it was the 3rd ID birthday," she said.

This year, Daniels' choice to recommit to the Army on the division's 90th birthday was intentional. Daniels is deployed to Baghdad again, under the command of the Multinational Division Center.

Still, Daniels, a native of Miami, said the decision is bittersweet. While she loves her job, she said, the separation from her husband and four children is hard.

"I like the camaraderie; I like the teamwork," she said of the Army. "I don't like to deploy every other year."

This year, as the ceremony fell the day before Thanksgiving, Daniels had home on her mind. She said Thanksgiving trumps Christmas in her family, and she begged her husband and children to carry on the elaborate food preparation and holiday traditions in her stead.

Despite the sacrificed holiday, her conviction to serve remains unshaken. "I'm re-enlisting for the needs of the Army," she said.

Gen. David H. Petraeus, commander of Multinational Division Iraq, officiated over the ceremony.

"Re-enlisting Soldiers is one of my favorite duties — one of the greatest honors I think any of us can perform," the general said.

"And it is a true honor to be with you to re-enlist 281 of you at last count, and that does include a 'Sailor of One,'" Petraeus said in a play on the Army motto.

Spc. Heidi McNeely, also with Headquarters and Headquarters Support Company, re-enlisted in July. Her husband, food service specialist John McNeely, re-enlisted in a private ceremony last week.

On Nov. 21, John also joined other Multinational Division Center Soldiers and affirmed his commitment. Husband and wife, both from New Orleans, joined the Army for similar reasons.

"The biggest motivation was stability," McNeely said. "That's what keeps me and him going."

But being deployed simultaneously is a mixed blessing for the couple. "It's nice, ... comforting," McNeely said.

"But kind of scary because we have two kids."

John's parents are taking care of the children while mom and dad are deployed. Their oldest daughter, 8 years old, is aware enough to wonder where her parents are and why they went away. McNeely said she gave her children a simple explanation.

"I told them (it's) because there were people who needed help from us," McNeely explained. "I didn't go any further than that. She didn't question it. The only thing she questioned was if something was going to happen to me."

"I told her that God gave her to me," McNeely continued. "I'm not done taking care of her yet."

Both Daniels and McNeely say options for school are a factor in their decision.

Falling a day before Thanksgiving and on the day of the 3rd Infantry Division's birthday, the ceremony came as a poignant reminder of the tradition and duty that lie at the heart of a Soldier's choice to serve his or her country.

"I don't know where this division, this great division, will be when it celebrates one century of service in 2017," Petraeus said. "But I can guarantee you that wherever it is, future 'Dog Face Soldiers' will celebrate the courageous contributions that each of you is making in Iraq today. They will proudly look at each of you the same way you look back at some of your predecessors."

Fort Jackson Partners in Education receives state award recognition

The State Board of Education Volunteer Awards Program annually recognizes civic organizations, individuals and school improvement councils for significant contributions to public education.

Each county in South Carolina makes a nomination, and then a select few are chosen. Among the 24 chosen was Partnerships in Education, a program under the Fort Jackson School Liaison Office.

Fort Jackson PIE was nominated by Richland School District 2 and was presented the award Nov. 14 at the State Department of Education.

"Hundreds of students' lives have been positively changed by those we are saluting this year," said Jim Rex, state superintendent of education. "Their stories are inspiring. They remind us that everyone has a role to play in ensuring that our young people are successful and in building schools that are second to none."

The annual awards are authorized by the Education Improvement Act of 1984 and are designed to honor the time, energy, talents and other resources contributed to South Carolina's public schools.

The volunteer awards honor significant contributions made by four categories of recipients: individuals, businesses, civic organizations and school improvement councils. Candidates are nominated by school districts. Criteria for selection include promoting student achievement, enhancing school-community relations, strengthening school or district resources, encouraging a positive climate and promoting teacher effectiveness.

Soldiers, civilians kick habit at 'Walk Your Butts Off'

Theresa O'Hagan

Morale, Welfare and Recreation

Nearly 60 Soldiers and civilians took their first step toward better health at the third annual "Walk Your Butts Off" at Patriots Park Nov. 16.

The annual event raises awareness of the dangers of all tobacco use and to encourage users to quit.

Several ex-smokers explained why they quit and how they did it.

Pam Greene led the participants in warm-up stretching before the walk. Mark Smyers, recreation programmer for Morale, Welfare and Recreation, led the walk on the Green Zone Trail.

All participants were treated to samplings at the 512 Trolley and were given the choice to walk back or ride back. Once back at Patriots Park, tobacco users tossed their products into the amnesty trash can. Every one was treated to lunch provided by the Officers' Club — cold turkey and smoked ham sandwiches, chips, brownies, fruit cups and soft drinks.

Each participant received a "I Kicked Butts on the Green Zone Trail" T-shirt designed and provided by Firehouse Productions and a "Kick Butts Survival Kit" provided by MWR marketing and Army Public Health Nursing. Century Lanes, Marion Street Station, Palmetto Greens Miniature Golf and the Officers' Club also provided coupons in each kit. A drawing was held for a $50 gift card and a one-year fitness and aerobics membership to Andy's Fitness Center.

Recognizing diabetes and monitoring it

Col. James Mundy

Moncrief Army Community Hospital is committed to assisting you in making the most of all of your health and benefits and November is Diabetes Awareness Month.

To help maintain optimal health, anyone with any kind of chronic condition, such as diabetes needs to ensure that he or she follows certain guidelines to prevent complications from the condition.

It is highly recommended to people with diabetes to follow through with taking the time and extra effort to do the following steps:

- Plan a yearly visit to a health care provider at MACH who treats diabetes. This allows providers to monitor their patients and their diabetes and make changes to the treatment plan if necessary.
- Receive a yearly fasting lipid profile test to include LDL (low density lipoprotein) cholesterol.
- Receive a yearly micro albumin urine test.
- Get an A1C test at least twice a year.
- Receive a dilated eye exam once a year.
- Do a blood pressure check at each office visit — systolic (top number) blood pressure should be 130 or less and diastolic (bottom number) should be 80 or less.

- Get a yearly foot examination.

Call 751- CARE (2273) for an appointment with a health care provider today.

Jump start a healthful lifestyle today. Everyone should know his or her numbers and help health care providers in attaining personal optimal health.

Dec. 1 is World AIDS Day

Sandra Norcross, R.N.

Moncrief Army Community Hospital

Established by the World Health Organization in 1988, World AIDS Day focuses global attention on the devastating effect of the HIV/AIDS pandemic. Observance of this day provides an opportunity for governments, national AIDS programs, faith organizations, community organizations and individuals to demonstrate the importance of the fight against HIV/AIDS.

With an estimated 38.6 million people worldwide living with HIV at the end of 2005, and more than 25 million people having died of AIDS since 1981, Dec. 1 serves to remind everyone that action makes a difference in the fight against HIV/AIDS.

Americans should be reminded that HIV/AIDS does not discriminate. With an estimated 1,039,000 to 1,185,000 HIV-positive people living in the United States, and approximately 40,000 new infections occurring every year, the United States, like other nations around the world, is deeply affected by HIV/AIDS.

Visit <http://www.hhs.gov/aidsawarenessdays> to download materials, such as fact sheets, that provide HIV/AIDS statistics and the new World AIDS Day poster, to assist in efforts to educate, motivate and mobilize the local community in the fight against HIV/AIDS.

Also, visit AIDS.gov, which was launched in 2006 to provide users easy access to information on federal HIV/AIDS prevention, testing, treatment and research programs, policies and resources.

Life in the barrack

Chris Rasmussen
Leader Staff

It's 5:15 a.m. inside the men's barracks for Company B, 2nd Battalion, 39th Infantry Regiment and while some Soldiers continue to sleep, others are already stirring to get ready for the day.

Fifteen minutes later, the familiar voice over the loudspeaker tells everyone to wake up and get ready for physical training. Thus begins another morning in the barracks, a ritual that will continue for four more weeks of Basic Combat Training.

Once the Soldiers are out of bed, it is time to get dressed in their PT uniforms, make their beds, pay a visit to the bathroom for personal hygiene time and square away their gear for the day.

"I like to get up at 5 a.m. so I can have time to shower and shave," said Pfc. Kurt Allmendinger, of Orange, Calif. "Others like to sleep in until wake-up call. I would just rather have the extra time to get ready. Our drill sergeants instill time management in us. They give us a schedule and it is our job to follow it."

Once the men of third platoon complete their morning rituals, most of them are out of the barracks and ready for physical training. After some intense PT time, the Soldiers eat breakfast and begin a full day of training, rarely returning to the barracks until that evening after chow.

In their fourth week of BCT, Soldiers with Co. B, 2nd Bn., 39th Inf. Reg. spend the entire day in the classroom learning about Basic Rifle Marksmanship.

Following a day of intense learning, most Soldiers look forward to relaxing for an hour of personal time in the barracks. On this day, however, there was no time for relaxing. Following their evening meal, the Soldiers find out they will have to undergo extra PT for some infractions committed earlier in the day.

After running around the battalion's running track in a light mist, the Soldiers — male and female — fall into the men's barracks to wait for mail call. After receiving their mail, the female Soldiers return to their barracks for personal time.

Pvt. Amy Bruchman, of Tri-Cities, Wash., got a letter and photos from her husband.

"This means so much. After getting smoked by our drill sergeants, to get something like this at the end of the night makes everything worth it," she said. "The letter and pictures are a reminder of why I am here."

As mail call is read, the male Soldiers use the sole desk in the men's third platoon barracks to write their own letters home.

"This desk sees a lot of action," Allmendinger said. "We really enjoy our personal time at night. During the first few weeks they only gave us about 10 minutes of personal time. But now that we are in the White Phase they give us an hour. We don't always get it though. It is up to us. If we do all our training and do our job, they give us personal time."

While some Soldiers write letters home during their personal time, others can be found cleaning their boots, doing laundry, getting their uniform ready or just chatting with their friends.

"I try to talk with everyone and joke around with them," said Pvt. Joseph Mabe, of Hillsville, Va. "I just want to put a smile on their face and put them in a better mood."

Because of lights out at 9 p.m., Soldiers must move quickly to get their chores done before hitting the sack and going to sleep.

"They run us so much during the day that by the time it's time to go to bed, we are out," said Pvt. Kyle White, of Helena, Ga. "It is easy to sleep, except for a few people who snore."

120th Adjutant General Bn. (Reception)

I would like to share a story with you about a young man who used the skills he had learned to engage his nation’s enemy in battle.

The story is about David, who was a shepherd boy and musician. He went to the front lines to take food to his older brothers who were in the Israelite army.

He saw the giant, Goliath, taunting the army, calling on someone, anyone, to come engage him in battle. David, confident that God would enable him to be triumphant in battle, took up the challenge and faced off with the giant with just a simple shepherd’s sling and five stones.

He was so confident in the Lord’s promise of victory that he ran to engage the giant. As he stood ready to commence the attack, he took out one of the five stones and laid it in his sling. (I Samuel 17:49-50)

David probably had one chance to defeat the giant, which was all he needed. He knew God was on his side.

He felt the stone in his hand — the weight of it. It was likely the size of a baseball or a bit larger, weighing about 1 pound. He took the stone and laid it in the sling, spun the sling around over his head, and let it fly.

This was a deadly weapon in the hands of a skilled shepherd. The stone hit the giant in the temple, shattering his skull, immediately rendering the giant’s brain useless and unable to sustain life.

The hand of God guided the stone. David thus triumphed over the giant, just as he said he would. David made himself available and God faithfully delivered what he had promised.

Nov. 12, the nation paused to honor our veterans, those who have been triumphant in battle. Let us always remember their courage and tremendous sacrifice.

Those of us in uniform are now a part of this time-honored tradition of military service. We may be expected to answer the call to battle, just as our veterans were — just as David was.

We can trust that God will be with us just as he was with David.

Whether veteran or not, we face other battles every day. Family situations, interpersonal conflicts and financial difficulties are among the challenges we face.

Your battle today might be a spiritual one. Perhaps you need God to help you have faith, or to give you peace about your circumstances. Perhaps your struggle is with sin.

Know that God is just as concerned

Cases of the Week

A civilian is banned from Fort Jackson for the next five years in connection with a botched attempt to bring marijuana on post.

A Soldier reported a possible Possession of a Controlled Substance. The Soldier observed the civilian drop two plastic bags containing a leafy substance before being inspected at gate 2.

A field test proved positive for THC, an active ingredient found in marijuana. The civilian was apprehended, searched and transported to PMO.

The civilian was then advised of his legal rights, which were waived by rendering a sworn statement and admitting to the above offense.

Military Police responded to a report of a Weapon in a Vehicle.

After stopping the car, the MPs discovered the weapon to be a toy belonging to the child of the car’s driver.

A Soldier reported a house break-in and Larceny of Private Property.

A Sony PlayStation 3, a Microsoft Xbox 360, a Hewlett-Packard laptop computer, a Kenwood stereo receiver and various items of jewelry and precious metals have been reported stolen.

All items were left secured and unattended. No subjects or witnesses could be found. An investigation is under way.

Tip of the Week

Most criminals look for targets of opportunity. With the holiday season upon us, many will be shopping for gifts and leaving them in the car as they continue from store to store. Anything that makes crime more difficult serves as a deterrent.

Do not make it easy for a criminal to victimize — do not leave valuables unattended or in plain view.

The lack of visible valuables in a vehicle will often deter a criminal from even taking the time to target the vehicle.

Transition for separating Soldiers

Donald Johnson

Personnel Operation Work Center

Q I am separating from the Army soon, and I would like some information about the transition process.

A Soldiers who are being released from active duty or discharged can out process one day before the start date of their transition leave.

All Soldiers who are separating from the Army can obtain a copy of their DD Form 214 worksheet in advance for review or for submission along with his or her Veterans Affairs disability claim, if planning to file.

The Soldier's military personnel file will be delivered to the Transition Center by the Fort Jackson Retirement Services for Soldiers assigned to FJ units or by Postal Express Services for Soldiers not assigned to the installation but who have requested Fort Jackson to be their place of transition or for Soldiers who are attached for duty at Fort Jackson.

On the day before commencement of transition leave, the Soldier will report to the Transition Center after his or her appointment with in- and out-processing.

Medical and dental records are collected by the Transition Center personnel, unless the Soldier is filing a VA claim and has surrendered those records to the VA representative; if this applies, the Soldier must provide Transition Center personnel with a signed memorandum from the VA representative who accepted the medical and dental records.

December is 'Drunk and Drugged Driving' Prevention Month

Sandra Barnes

Army Substance Abuse Program

The holiday season is supposed to be a time for family, friends and festive celebrations, but it is unfortunately also a time when we see a spike in the number of alcohol-related highway fatalities each year between Thanksgiving and New Year's.

Impaired driving is one of America's deadliest crimes. Nationally, more than 17,000 people died in alcohol-related highway crashes during 2003. Every 30 minutes, nearly 50 times a day, someone in America dies in an alcohol-related crash. Hundreds of thousands more are injured each year.

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, about three in every 10 Americans will be involved in an alcohol-related crash at some point in their lives.

With all of the office and holiday parties this holiday season, this is a critically important time of year to make sure to always designate a sober driver or "Battle Buddy" before the parties begin and to always remember that "Friends Don't Let Friends Drive Drunk."

December is celebrated as National Drunk and Drugged Driving (3D) Prevention Month. Since 1982, Army installations have supported what is referred to as National 3D Prevention Month.

December and the New Year's are also often highlighted by significant increases in state and local law enforcement efforts to combat impaired driving such as sobriety checkpoints and saturation patrols.

As part of this annual nationwide public information campaign against impaired driving during the holiday season, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration offers these reminders for a safer holiday season.

- Do not get behind the wheel of a vehicle if you have been out drinking;
- If you are impaired, call a taxi — use mass transit — or get a sober friend or family member to come and get you;
- Or just stay where you are and sleep it off until you are sober;
- And remember — "Friends Don't Let Friends Drive Drunk." Take the keys and never let a friend leave your sight if you think he or she is about to drive while impaired;

If you are hosting a party this holiday season, remind your guests to plan ahead, always offer alcohol-free beverages during the event and make sure all guests leave with a sober driver.

The consequences of driving impaired or riding with someone who is impaired are serious and real.

Not only does someone driving impaired risk his or her own life, but puts other lives in danger. The trauma and financial costs of a crash or an arrest for driving while impaired are also significant.

People also have a moral obligation to take care of others whom they contact. When people drink, the ability they have to make rational decisions is lessened, as are their reflexes.

People also have an obligation to protect innocent bystanders from harm by keeping friends and family members from picking up the car keys if they have consumed alcohol — even one drink.

A little effort on everybody's part could mean the difference between life and death. So remember, this holiday season, if you catch a buzz, catch a ride.

Editor's Note: Part of the information in this article was retrieved from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. If you have any questions regarding this article or other issues of substance abuse you may contact the ASAP at 751-5007.

LEGAL

Who needs a living will, power of attorney?

Capt. Ryan Dodd
Legal Assistance Attorney

Is every person certain that his or her family members and loved ones know exactly what his or her wishes are in the event that he or she is unable to make personal health care decisions?

Living wills and health care powers of attorney are “advance directives” which allow someone to make personal health-care-related wishes known and designate the type of medical care he or she would like to receive. Without an advance directive, a hospital is legally bound to do everything to keep a patient alive, until the patient or a family member decides otherwise. With advance medical directives, patients have the ability to control decisions about their medical care.

A living will, known as a Declaration of a Desire for a Natural Death in South Carolina, is a declaration that only applies when the attending physician and another physician have determined a patient is either (1) terminally ill and close to death or (2) in a persistent vegetative state.

In either case, the patient declares his or her desire about artificially prolonging life through the use of medical intervention, such as a respirator. The only exception that patients can make on this “no life support” document is to elect whether he or she wishes to receive artificial nutrition and hydration in either case. If someone believes he or she may still want his or her life prolonged, he or she should not execute a living will.

A living will is enforceable as a last wish unless the patient chooses to give another person, referred to as an agent, power to revoke a living will. Patients can also appoint an agent to enforce a living will. Naming an agent to enforce a living will allows the patient to make sure that his or her wishes will be carried out, even if the hospital or doctor wants to keep the patient on life support.

Unlike the living will, which only applies in the two situations described above, a health care power of attorney applies at any time a patient is deemed to be incompetent to make his or her health care decisions. A health care power of attorney is the best assurance that an incapacitated patient’s medical care will be handled in the way he or she wants. In a health care power of attorney, the patient names the person he or she wants to make medical decisions for him or her if the patient is unable to make those decisions. This person is called an agent or attorney-in-fact. A health care power of attorney might apply if a patient is in an automobile accident and because of his or her injuries is unable to consent to treatment at the local hospital. The agent appointed in a health care power of attorney has the authority to make all the same medical decisions as the patient — choosing a doctor, admitting to a hospital, changing medications — so people should be careful in selecting an agent. Two alternate agents can also be named to serve in case the primary agent is unwilling or unable to serve.

It is important to keep health care documents, either the living will or the health care power of attorney or both, in a place where the agent always has access to it. It is not wise to keep only an original in a safe deposit box because it may not be found until after death or the agent may not be

Army Black Knights hope to end skid against Navy

Army Athletic Communications

WEST POINT, N.Y. — The 108th Army-Navy game will return to Baltimore, Md., Saturday. The 2007 contest will mark the fourth time the historic game has taken place in Baltimore and the first time since 2000.

The game will be played at M&T Bank Stadium (formerly PSINet Stadium) for the second time. The first two Army-Navy contests held in Baltimore were played at Municipal Stadium.

Army won both of those contests with Navy taking the 2000 meeting.

Army played its final home game of the 2007 season Nov. 17, losing to Tulsa, 49-39.

The Black Knights' offense had its best day of 2007, racking up season highs in points (39), yards (491), rushing yards (163), passing yards (328) and first downs (25). Senior wide receiver Jeremy Trimble caught 11 passes for 167 yards and two touchdowns to become the Black Knights' all-time leader in receiving yards (2,325) and touchdowns (15).

Trimble already owned the Army all-time receptions record. Sophomore quarterback Carson Williams had a career day, completing 26 of 38 passes for 328 yards and three touchdowns. It was the first 300-yard passing game by an Army signal caller since the 2003 season (Zac Dahman, Nov. 22 at Hawaii).

The Black Knights will be trying to snap a five-game skid to the Midshipmen. Navy's five-game winning streak in the rivalry is tied for the longest by either team. Neither Army nor Navy has ever won six straight games in the series. The Black Knights last won five straight against the Mids from 1992-96.

Only 10 Football Bowl Subdivision rivalries have featured more games than the Army-Navy series' 107 previous contests.

This revered series began when Cadet Dennis Mahan Michie accepted a "challenge" from Naval Academy midshipmen for a football game against the Cadets.

That first contest was held on "The Plain" at West Point on Nov. 29, 1890. The more experienced Mids, who had been playing organized football since 1879, defeated the Cadets 24-0.

Eighty of the 107 Army-Navy games have been played in Philadelphia. Since 1945, the game has been held outside of Philadelphia only six times.

The 1983 game was played at the Rose Bowl, while the 1989, 1993, 1997 and 2001 confrontations took place at Giants Stadium. M&T Bank Stadium in Baltimore played host to the classic in 2000. The Army-Navy Classic will return to Philadelphia for 2008 and 2009.

Army-Navy games have been contested at 15 different sites since the birth of the series in 1890. Those sites follow: West Point (three, at two locations), Annapolis (three), Palmer Stadium (one), Franklin Field (18), Polo Grounds (nine), Baltimore Stadium (two), Soldier Field (one), Yankee Stadium (two), Municipal/John F. Kennedy Stadium (41), Veterans Stadium (17), Rose Bowl (one), Giants Stadium (four), M&T Bank Stadium (one) and Lincoln Financial Field (four).

Lincoln Financial Field became the 15th different venue to host the classic when it made its Army-Navy "debut" in 2003.

Only 226 points (2.1 ppg.) separate the teams through the Classic's initial 107 pairings. Navy has scored 1,597 points (14.9), while Army has recorded 1,371 points (12.8).

Fans can watch the Army-Navy game on CBS, which has broadcast the game since the 1996 season. Another option is to listen to the game on the Army Sports Network, 770-AM, New York, N.Y.; Westwood One national radio; or on Sirius Satellite Radio (channel 123).

The Army-Navy series

- While Army enjoyed the upper hand against Navy during the majority of the decade of the 1990s, Navy has turned the tide in recent years to grab a 51-49-7 advantage in the classic rivalry.

- Taking a broader view, Army has prevailed in 11 of the last 21 meetings with its arch rival.

- Hard-fought Army victories were commonplace in the 1990s, with the Black Knights prevailing in seven of those 10 matchups. Those seven Army victories came by a total of 24 points, with an amazing six-game stretch of Cadet wins decided by a total of only 14 points.

The point differential over the course of the 107-game series stands at a rather microscopic 226 points (an average of 2.1 points per game). That figure stood at 92 entering the 2002 contest, but Navy has outscored Army 202-68 the last five years. The Mids blasted Army 58-12 in 2002, setting a series-record scoring total in the process, then followed with 34-6, 42-13, 42-23 and 26-14 victories the past four years.

An Army win vs. Navy would ...

- Snap Army's five-game losing streak.
- End the Black Knights' five-game losing skid to Navy.
- Even Army's Commander-In-Chief's Trophy record at 1-1 in 2007 (lost at Air Force) and create a three-way tie for the trophy.

- Be the Black Knights' 50th win against Navy (49-51-7).

- End Army's four-game losing streak against its service academy rivals

- Make Stan Brock the first Army head coach to win his first game against Navy since Tom Cahill defeated the Midshipmen in 1966.

- Run Army's all-time record against Navy in Baltimore to 3-1.

- Be Army's first victory versus a FBS squad that finished its season with an above-.500 record since defeating Akron in 2005 (7-6).

- Surpass the Black Knights' win total from last season and mark the third time since 1997 that Army has won as many as four games in one season.

- Be the 635th win in the 118 seasons of Army football (634-439-51; .587).
